

A Tribute to Percy Jackson Show...

Zeus, Poseidon and Percy?

It all started with a dream, at least that's what Percy thought. It had to be a dream, because your math teacher, Mrs. Dodds, shouldn't have wings like a bat, let alone yellow dripping fangs. She shouldn't be to trying to kill anyone. She was furious. Maybe it was a video game gone terribly wrong.

The roller coaster ride was just starting for a nice enough, middle school guy with ADHD and some dyslexia thrown in to complicate his already weird life. His Mom was great, his real dad was gone and his stepdad, old Smelly Gabe wasn't anybody you'd introduce your friends to. What a life. Percy needed one of those mythical heroes to step in and save the day. He just didn't know the Hero was going to be him.

Five books and a major movie later, the Percy Jackson books fly off the shelves in libraries like there are wings on them. These books have become one of young readers most favorite series of stories. So, once upon a time a librarian asked Magic Don to create a new program about Greek myths and Percy Jackson. He did.

The show Zeus, Poseidon and Percy? explores the ancient Greek Gods, demigods, heroes and their myths in a way that only Magic Don can. The children learn through audience participation, the magic and the mini plays and stories. Here are a few examples:

A child volunteer is chained and locked up to see if he has the strength of Hercules and can escape, save the girl and defeat our Medusa (okay, it's a kid in a rubber snakes hat). Relax, he always does saves the day.

After exploring the Greek gods family tree and their special powers. three children dream of what powers they'd like to have and Magic Don demonstrates his oracle like abilities and predicts their choices in advance.

The story of Prometheus, who brought fire to mankind, ends quickly because the story is so hot the book catches fire.

Kids dream of defeating the challenges of growing up just like Percy and having some super powers couldn't hurt. This show tells the old Greek stories and some new ones of kid heroes.
